Noteworthy News

The new sculptures along Upper Shoe Pond were created by career architect-sculptor Larry Brown. Larry enjoys bringing a sense of dimensionality to his art. The spatial openness of this large art installation invites people to walk in and around the abstract sculptures. The displays were created using fiberglass from boat hulls. The first sculpture, located near 600 Cummings Center, is called "Tusks." The second display, called "Sunfish," consists of three sculptures along the fence line of Upper Shoe Pond. Each individual sculpture is available

Friendly Reminder

Fire Alarm Safety: In the event a fire alarm sounds, evacuate the building immediately. To ensure the safety of yourself and others, please remain a safe distance from the building. This will allow everyone to evacuate the building without hindering the efforts of the fire officials. Should such a fire or any other building evacuation emergency occur, wait for police or fire officials to announce that it is safe before re-entering a building. In the event that you accidentally trigger an alarm, please remain present and communicate what occurred to the fire department.

Urban Design Goes Suburban: If you think you need to be in the heart of Boston or Cambridge to lease office space with the chic and modern vibe of an urban center, think again. The new Innovative Suite at Cummings Center harkens back to the industrial boom of the early 20th century while incorporating contemporary office design elements similar to those that draw pioneering firms to Kendall Square and the Seaport District. For entrepreneurs in search of an office with an urban attitude, Cummings Center's new Innovative Suite - similar to those built by Cummings' in-house design and construction teams for Quarto Publishing Group and DataOne Software - delivers.
